Domingos Carneiro, hailing from Portugal, initially delved into the world of agility as a pastime. However, after the Agility World Championship in Portugal in 2001, he set the goal of participating in global competitions. With his Staffordshire Bull Terrier, Herói, he achieved multiple vice-national championships and competed in three world championships.

Transitioning to the standard class, he trained Breja, a Border Collie, becoming a national champion and qualifying for two world championships. The next challenge was in the mini class with Vaga, a Boston Terrier, where he became a national champion in the first year and participated in two world championships.

His passion for agility led him to pursue a judging career in 2011, attaining international certification in 2013. As a judge, his primary goal is to design courses that prioritize the well-being of dogs while being fast and fluid. He finds immense joy in witnessing dogs run with enthusiasm.

He is very proud to have been given the opportunity to participate in such significant world class event.

With a wealth of judging experience, primarily in Portugal and Spain, he has contributed to selective events for Europeans and world championships. Additionally, he has shared his judging expertise in countries such as Ireland and France.
